What is Independent Director?

For Single Purpose entities or single-member LLC's seeking financing, lenders may require independent directors or sometimes called special members to be appointed. The Independent Director is considered a member of the board of directors of the entity but is not an employee, nor are they affiliated with any of the inside directors. They do not have any ownership interest in the entity and their duties are defined by a separate agreement. They act as a guide to the company to maintain corporate credibility and compliance and play a vital role in risk management. Telos Legal Corp. is pleased to offer Independent Director services with competitive fixed "per entity" annual rate of $1,400 and no additional cost for springing member to maintain corporate compliance.
